We Believe You: An Introduction to On and Off-Campus Resources for Survivors at Rutgers

A Social Action Project by Marina Ford
December 2, 2020
The Leadership Scholars Certificate Program is a two-year selective, interdisciplinary certificate program that prepares Rutgers undergraduate women to be informed, innovative, and socially responsible leaders.

Leadership Scholars design and implement social action projects to expand their understanding of issues and problems and to develop leadership skills.

This project gives Scholars the opportunity to apply the theoretical knowledge they have gained about leadership, advocacy, and social change with the practical and experiential knowledge they have developed about a particular policy issue or problem through the field site placement. It also further develops leadership skills by giving undergraduates the opportunity to practice leadership through action.

Sexual Assault and Undergraduate Women in the U.S.

• Most do no report (Spencer, 2017).
• Bisexual students at heightened risk of experiencing sexual assault—nearly double the risk of gay and lesbian students and 2.5 times the risk of heterosexual students” (Worthen 191).

We hear you. We see you. We believe you.

#believesurvivors
Why don’t undergraduate women report their sexual assaults?

“It was not a big enough deal.”

“I didn’t know who to report to or that I could report.”

“It wasn’t related to the university.”

“I was afraid.”

“Because I was drunk.”

“I didn’t want to get him in trouble.”

“Too ashamed to report.”

“I felt as though I would be blamed for putting myself in that situation.”

Goals of My Social Action Project

• Show students the resources
• Educate students with help from expert panelists
• INCLUSIVITY!
• Relevant resources during the COVID-19 pandemic
• Safe-space for survivors
• Encourage conversations about:
  • consent
  • sexual assault education
  • healthy vs. unhealthy relationships
  • rape culture

Interesting Findings

• When I conducted a post-event feedback form, one of my questions was: Did you know about all of the resources and offices discussed today before the event?
  • NONE of the 11 respondents knew about all 4 resources
  • 2 out of 11 respondents knew about some of the resources
  • 9 out of 11 respondents did not know about any of them
    (My Google Form)

• Study with 220 female survivors of sexual assault on U.S. college campuses found that one of the top reasons students do not report is because they didn’t know what resources were available to them. They didn’t know “who to report to or that they could report” (Spencer 173).
“Most campus sexual education assault programs are designed around heteronormative relationships, some students—particularly lesbian, gay, and bisexual (LGB) students—are especially vulnerable to remaining undereducated about sexual assault despite the presence of campus-wide education programs” (Worthen 180).
“Compared to women in the general population, college age women (18–24 years-old) are 3 times more likely to be sexually assaulted” (Potter 496).
“I really liked the fact that this should be taught earlier in schools (before college). I thought the moderator did an excellent job - Informative & thought provoking - particularly like that we all need to be advocates.”

“I enjoyed hearing about the services Rutgers offers which I wish I knew about when I was dating someone who I was serious with. Now that I know about the services, I will visit them and read more about them and communicate concerns if needed to people involved in VPVA.”

“This event was very eye-opening for me, as a Cis-gender white male. This is the first event about sexual violence that I’ve experienced and it was so cool to see professionals representing different organizations have a productive and thought-invoking conversation. I enjoyed in particular the topics of partnership and educating children and feel like those are very realistic ways to be more active in reducing sexual violence. Kudos to all of the panelists!”

Thank you to all of my panelists- Maddy Zijdel, Navneet Bhalla, Jennifer Kurdyla, and Lindsay Jeffers, as well as the advocates who were on the call.

I would also like to thank my two project advisors Maddy Zijdel and Laura Luciano for all of their guidance and expertise.

Thank you to the Institute for Women’s Leadership for funding this project and giving me the opportunity to make my vision a reality.
